

CORBRIDGE, PEARL GOODRICH
1889-February 1, 1914

Mrs. Pearl Goodrich Corbridge died about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon without a moment's warning, from sudden heart failure. She was at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G.T. Goodrich, where she had gone last Sunday with her two weeks old baby girl for a visit. She had been rocking and singing to her babe and wanting something in another room, arose and walked across the floor and fell without a cry, and in a moment was gone. The family phoned to Mr. Corbridge and he with Dr. Fish rushed out to the farm with an auto but nothing could be done to bring back the spark of life. But two hours earlier, Mr. Corbridge had talked to her over the phone and she then said she was feeling fine.

Just a year ago this month, she became the wife of Harvey C. Corbridge, who has been associated with The Times the past three years. On Jan. 26., she gave birth to a daughter and since that time had been getting along very nicely. She had always been an unusually strong and healthy girl and woman and her sudden death seems to be one of those startling mysteries that are beyond human understanding.

Mrs. Corbridge had resided in this locality since girlhood. She was very widely known, respected and loved for her splendid Christian character and noble womanly qualities. The deep sympathy of the entire community goes out to the heart broken husband, family and motherless babe.

Funeral services will be held Saturday from the M.E. church, of which Mrs. Corbridge had been long a member.
